About this piece

A pair of good-quality Aesthetic Movement cum Arts & Crafts solid oak dining tables

These tables feature wonderful quarter-sawn tiger grain throughout the oak, with square legs and chamfered edges. They are designed to be used as two separate dining tables or, when required, joined together to make a long dining or conference table.

When joined, as shown in the images, they will comfortably seat up to fourteen people. They slide and join together seamlessly with dowels and holes (see last image).

Additionally, there are two slides at the end of each table (two shown in image three and one shown in the last image). The slides sit neatly inside the tabletop and can pull out to rest a central leaf on, making the entire table even longer, which will then comfortably seat up to eighteen or even twenty people.

The original central oak leaf was lost many years ago, but they fit together perfectly well without it. However, if you need it to seat eighteen to twenty people from time to time, we can make a replacement centre leaf from period oak in our own workshops and stain and polish it to match for you at a cost to us of £550.

The tables can also be used as two separate dining or even work tables that would both comfortably seat eight. The tables are extra deep at 4 feet 6 inches deep, providing ample room in the middle for serving dishes and centrepieces. They are even wide enough to fit two children side by side at each end.

Measurements: Each table measures 7 feet 5 inches in length and 4 feet 6 inches in depth. (Image 3 is an optical illusion; they are exactly the same measurements). Length joined together: 14 feet 10 inches, width 4 feet 6 inches. Further length can be added if required with a new leaf made to your desired measurements.

They are probably made by Gillows of Lancaster; such good quality one could dance on them!
