About this piece

A set of three brass wall lights dating to c.1905, designed in the Arts and Crafts Movement style. Each fitting features a scrolling brass arm with foliate terminals mounted on a shaped walnut backplate, combining warmth of timber with the reflective richness of polished metal. The fittings are designed for electric wiring and demonstrate the movement's transition from handcrafted ornament to functional domestic lighting. Their sculptural composition and refined materials typify early twentieth-century British craftsmanship.
