About this piece

An English Arts and Crafts oak court cupboard dating to c.1895, handmade by an accomplished craftsman. The cupboard features geometric panelled doors with raised motifs and a forged iron handle, demonstrating the close collaboration between joiner and blacksmith typical of the movement. The design reflects a commitment to structural honesty and handcrafted quality, with a warm, well-figured oak surface that highlights the grain. It is a robust and beautifully proportioned example of late 19th-century English vernacular craftsmanship.
