About this piece

An oak folding card table aligned to the Arts and Crafts movement, c.1900, attributed to Liberty and Co. The top folds along a central seam and opens to form a square surface, supported by four tapering square legs. A fixed lower shelf sits between the legs, adding stability and giving the table its light, architectural outline.

The legs rise cleanly into shallow arched aprons, creating a gentle rhythm beneath the top. The table has been cleaned and repolished to a medium oak tone. When folded it forms a compact rectangular profile suited to occasional use or easy storage.
